Alex Nagle joined the CEOP Centre shortly after its launch in April 2006, with a background that includes over 24 years in public service. He has worked in a variety of roles including investigative work focused on tackling organised social security fraud, was private secretary to government ministers and most recently, as the first Director of Security Management for the NHS, pioneered a highly successful programme to drive down violence against staff in the NHS - a scheme that saw a 15 fold increase in prosecutions and reduction in assaults against staff. Since joining CEOP he has overseen the delivery of the Thinkuknow education campaign to 1.1 million children, the establishment of the CEOP Academy for frontline practitioners and the creation of the Behavioural Analysis Unit.
