

Talking Heads is the producer of the Teentalk Training package. Participants are offered a step-by-step guided tour and direct experience of using a Teentalk package. An understanding of the strong practical and participatory focus of the materials enables practitioners to build upon their existing child-care skills and to confidently transfer and maximise these new methods in their direct face-to-face work with children and young people.

The training provides practitioners with:

1. the opportunity and the space to reflect on their practice.
2. an introduction to and overview of the product(s) in terms of the separate components, content and structure.
3. an introduction to the method and recording processes embedded in the product(s).
4. an introduction to the planning and preparation obligations required for the efficient and responsible use of the product(s).
5. an introduction to and appreciation of the 'User Manual' as the cornerstone of the product(s).

existing skills, confidence, understanding the process, structure, identifying relevant and meaningful content, effective use, planning and preparation, time
method, recording, responsibility.

Lunch will be provided.